

FAASTeam presents:

Considering an Instrument Rating

Is it time for your Instrument Rating?

Imagine this scenario. It's Sunday morning and you're at Santa Maria airport, eager to start the VFR trip home to the Bay Area after a fun weekend of wine-tasting. The skies are overcast at 800 with tops reported at 1,100. That thin cloud layer persists, anchoring you to the surface tighter than a tie-down chain. If you could file IFR, you'd be free to launch for a relaxed ride home. But there you sit, uncertain about when or if the layer will burn off.

Whether you're a student pilot, a new private pilot, or you've been flying for a while – you have probably considered getting an instrument rating. Is it time to get started? How much time will it take? What will it cost? How valuable is an instrument rating to a pilot that isn't flying wild Alaska?

Great questions. In this seminar, Anna Nguyen, CFII and Herb Patten, AGI will lead a group discussion on the pros, cons, challenges and benefits involved in earning your instrument rating. We'll discuss the various paths private pilots take toward earning their instrument rating, and the factors involved in making the decision to start the process.

Herb Patten is an FAA certificated advanced and instrument ground instructor who teaches private pilot ground school at San Carlos Flight Center. He holds a private pilot certificate with an instrument rating, has over 700 hours and flown into 111 different California airports. He is co-founder of the Bay Area Student and New Pilot Support Group, and a board member of the Upwind Foundation, famous for its Upwind Summer Scholarship Program. When not giving presentations he can be found in the air pursuing his aviation interest or supporting others in their flying adventures.

Anna Nguyen is a CFI, CFII and a MEI with over 1000 hours experience throughout the United States. In 2015, she joined San Carlos Flight Center and does primary, instrument and multi-engine training. San Carlos Flight Center was voted Best Flight School in the US in the 2013 AOPA Flight Training Excellence Awards. We are committed to promoting safety in general aviation through our evening safety seminar programs. For more information about this and any of our weekly seminars, please visit
